Rozsa-Sayler Nuptials Held at Baptist Church

The Carbon Baptist Church was the setting for a wedding ceremony Thursday afternoon, May 31, when marriage vows were exchanged by Miss Erma Alvira Sayler and Mr. Henry Rozsa. Rev. J. G. Rott read the marriage service at the nuptials, in which the bride was given away by her father, Mr. R. G. Sayler.

Traditional white satin fashioned the bride's wedding gown which was styled with a draped peplum edged with lace. Misting softly over her gown was a veil of illusion net held in place by a headdress of orange blossoms which had been worn by her mother. A bouquet of white carnations and pink rosebuds completed her ensemble.

The bride's attendants were Miss Phyllis Schuler as bridesmaid, who wore a gown of pink printed organdie and carrying a fan-shaped bouquet of green carnations, and Miss Irene Rozsa as flower girl, who was dressed in a pale green formal of printed organdie, carrying a basket of roses, carnations and sweetpeas.

The groomsmen were Daunavon Buyer, and Lawrence Sayler, little nephew of the bride, was ring bearer. The guests were ushered to their places by Mr. Elmer Sayler and Mr. Ben Schuler. Miss Nova Buyer was soloist, gowning in a pale blue organdie formal, and Mrs. J. G. Rott played the wedding music.

For the occasion the bride's mother chose a gown of blue velvet brocade with grey accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. The groom's mother was attired in green printed silk and wore a corsage of Kokomo carnations.

A reception for 25 guests was held at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Rozsa left by motor car for a honeymoon at Los Angeles, California. For going away the bride chose a suit of dusty rose with tan accessories, and a corsage consisting of a gardenia surrounded by tiny rosebuds. On their return the happy couple will make their home at Carbon.

G.B. Hotchkiss of Amherst, N.S., was ordained priest at a ceremony in Cathedral Church of the Redeemer, Calgary, Sunday morning. Rt. Rev. H.R. Ragg, Bishop of Calgary, performed the ritual.

Rev. Hotchkiss is a graduate of the University of Toronto and Trinity College and will take charge of the parish of Carbon, Acme and Three Hills.

Upkeep Of Alaska Road Very High

OTTAWA.—The Public Accounts Committee of the House of Commons devoted the greater proportion of a recent sitting to seeking information from top executives of the National Defence Department on the spending of that department during the fiscal year 1949-50.

During the questioning on expenditures on the maintenance of the Alaska Highway it was disclosed that it cost just over $7,000,000 to maintain the 1,221 miles from Dawson Creek in British Columbia to the Alaska border. Members of the committee felt that this was extremely high. Details will be provided at a future meeting.

It was pointed out by the officials of Defence Headquarters that American Army vehicles paid no tolls on the highway and that actually very few used it. Most of the American equipment for Alaska went in by air.

Wheat is known to have been cultivated early in the Stone Age.

Calgary Man Builds Bicycle For Four

CALGARY.—Most people have heard of the "bicycle built for two," immortalized in song since grandfather's day. But not so many have heard of a "bicycle built for four."

This relic reposes in the Calgary store of Matt B. Wolthuis, a middle-aged man who has never known any other work except that of building, repairing or racing bicycles.

Matt inherited the bicycle built for four from an old bicycle shop that went out of business many years ago. At least eight feet long, it requires some nerve and experience to pilot it. Apparently added weight makes it considerably more difficult to steer than the ordinary kind. Four novices riding it might run into a lot of grief.

Matt, who has worked in his store for most of the 23 years since he emigrated from Holland, also has an 1880 bicycle, popularly called the "penny-farthing" in its hey-day. Its front wheel is almost five feet in diameter, while the rear wheel is only about 18 inches. The wheels are less than an inch thick.

The pioneer bicycle man occasionally rides this monster. But he has a better purpose for it. Publicity-wise, he exhibits the penny-farthing in front of his shop as an eye-catcher for prospective customers.

Matt never got rich, but he did achieve happiness with the bicycle, his first love.

He is particularly proud also of his assistant, Fred Anderson, believed the first man ever to cross Canada on a bicycle. He accomplished this feat in June, 1946, covering the 4,600 miles from Vancouver to Sydney, N.S., in 25 days.

MANY DUTCH IMMIGRANTS WILL COME WEST

EDMONTON.—About 7,500 Dutch immigrants are expected to come to Canada this year, Sjoerd Van Dar Meulen, operator of a Dutch travel agency, said. This would be 1,500 more than last year.

Mr. Van Dar Meulen said that while a large number of Dutch immigrants have been settling in Ontario, a greater proportion are expected to settle in western Canada this year.

Funny and Otherwise

Just heard of a schoolboy who visited a district bookstore the other day and after browsing along the shelves for half an hour selected a book entitled "Advice To Young Mothers".

"I think I'll take that book," he told the bookseller. "I'm interested in collecting moths and butterflies."

"Your wife drives like lightning, doesn't she?"

"Yes—always striking trees."

A matron once boasted she could make President Coolidge talk. Cornering him at a dinner, she sought to make good her boast.

"Oh, Mr. President," she said, trying to disarm him with frankness, "I have made a bet that I can make you say at least three words."

"You lose," Coolidge replied.

The prim old lady was given the first glass of beer she ever had. After sipping it for a moment she looked up with a puzzled air.

"How odd!" she murmured. "It tastes just like the medicine my husband has been taking for the last twenty years."

Father-in-law: "I suppose you know that when I die my daughter will inherit $50,000? Well, why don't you say something?"

Son-in-law: "Drop dead!"

Teacher—"Johnnie, I'm ashamed of you. When I was no bigger than you, I could reel all the Presidents off in order without hesitation."

Johnnie—"Yeah; but there was only three or four of them then."

Prisoner—"The judge sent me here for the rest of my life."

Prison Guard—"Got any complaints?"

Prisoner—"Do you call breaking rock with a hammer a rest?"

A woman hit her husband over the head with a heavy table lamp because he was singing, "I Wish I Were Single Again". Somehow we doubt if this made him stop wishing it.

Little girl (on a transcontinental train): "Mama, what's the name of the last station we stopped at?"

Mother: "Don't bother me. Can't you see I'm reading. Why do you ask?"

Little girl: "Because brother got off there."

Bringing Animals Back Alive Is Booming Business

Noel Rosefelt with the lady elephant who wasn't "expecting", after all.

By JOSEPH STOCKER
(CPC Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES.—Like real estate and automobiles, the business of catching, bringing back and selling wild jungle animals has enjoyed a big boom during the post-World War II years.

Zoos and parks couldn't get any animals during the war, there being no ships available for transport. So VJ-Day found a strong pent-up demand waiting to be satisfied.

That's what Noel Rosefelt of Los Angeles has been doing these last few years—bringing back the supply to meet the demand. Since the war ended, he has made 27 trips to Siam, Borneo, Burma and other hot and far-off places, scouring the jungles in search of select specimens for little boys to throw peanuts to.

He has done very well in the business, too. Rosefelt estimates his firm, Catalina Wild Life Expeditions in one year brought in $250,000 worth of animals and birds.

One method of snaring monkeys is to spray a field of corn, by plane, with a sedative solution known as "sleeping mist". The monkeys eat the corn, fall asleep on the spot and may then be gathered up.

Monkeys often are caught by pouring some rice into a pop bottle. Then you set the pop bottle among the trees. Along comes the monkey. He thrusts his hand into the bottle for the rice and is then confronted with an ugly dilemma:

If he holds on to a clenched fistful of rice, he can't get his hand out of the bottle. If he wants to get it out of the bottle, he can't bring the rice with it. While he is worrying with his little problem, you nab him.

Birds often are trapped by smearing latex (raw rubber) on tree branches. Works like fly paper. The sedative system is sometimes used here, too.

Rosefelt, in quest of king vultures, once had a veterinarian mix a batch of sleeping powder for him. Then he dug a pit, filled it with garbage and stirred in the sleeping powder. When he went back, he found seven king vultures—all dead. The veterinarian had mixed an overdose.

Rosefelt captures elephants by sending out a horde of natives to surround a herd and shoot the jumbos into a stockade with drums and flaming torches. (Elephants fear fire.)

Then they're hogtied and literally starved into behaving themselves. Not until they submit do they get any food or water. The process of breaking in an elephant takes about three weeks.

When he wants the young of a ferocious species, Rosefelt must kill its parents. Even though he finds the young untamed momentarily, he waits until the parents return and then plugs them. Otherwise, he says, they'd track him to the ends of the jungle—and possibly catch up.

During the past two years, among other things, Rosefelt has brought back 62 elephants, including one that was pregnant, or at least he thought she was.

She had titanic seizures of morning sickness all the way from Siam, and her arrival caused quite a stir. A London zoo director cabled to ask if she was going to have twins and someone offered to supply milk for the baby.

Once ashore, the pachyderm was acquired by an outfit in Hollywood which leases elephants out to shows, circuses and such. Months later they discovered she wasn't pregnant at all. Just overweight. Glands, or something.

It was Rosefelt also who brought back the leopard which took French leave from the Oklahoma City zoo recently and skulked for several days across the nation's front pages.

Marsh Land In British Columbia To Be Reclaimed

ROTTERDAM, The Netherlands.—Foundation of the Canadian Commercial Corporation of the Netherlands, to reclaim marsh land in the Fraser Valley near Vancouver, was announced recently.

The organization, capitalized at $350,000, will reclaim about 6,250 acres for Netherlands' farmer-immigrants. Engineers expect to have 3,750 acres ready for cultivation within a year.

N. Biezeveld, the corporation's field engineer, left to supervise Canadian workmen in the preliminary stages, which will involve building dikes.

Plans call for establishment of an agricultural school with a model farm.

Recipe For Never Growing Old

MONTREAL.—"I'm not old, I'm just not young," says Mistinguette, the Parisian star, reported, to be all of 81, who made a hit at the Montmartre here.

There you are. There's your recipe for never growing old.

You can't stay young forever, no matter what the advertisements promise you. You can't hang onto youth, no matter how hard a battle you wage.

But you don't have to be "old". You don't even have to be "middle aged". You don't even have to think of yourself in any of those depressing categories.

So you're not young. Admit that much to yourself—but no more. There's nothing sad or depressing about her "not young".

Just because you're "not young" you don't have to reject new ideas.

You don't have to think the present is pretty dull and the future downright fearful. You don't have to start striving for people's sympathy, instead of continuing to earn their liking and respect.

You can ignore being "not young" and go right on with the business of living, keeping your interest wide awake and vivid, doing things for other people and making new friends. You can check every inclination to let others make your decisions for you, or shoulder your responsibilities. You don't have to be a leaner or a looker-on just because you're "not young".

It's when you start to think yourself as "older" or "getting older" that you begin to make all those mistakes—to fall into the poor habits you associate with being "old", to start expecting too much and giving too little.

That gal Mistinguette has the right idea. So what if she isn't young? She isn't old either—unless she decides she is.

until it was laid low by a piece of meat with a lethal Mickey Finn in it. Rosefelt knew it was a tough citizen even before it broke out of the zoo. It clawed him in the Burmese jungle, as it was being transferred from a cage to a net.

With the post-war demand for conventional animals like elephants and leopards pretty well supplied now, Rosefelt is concentrating on unconventional animals like Komodo lizards and pig-faced cats.

To Live Right — Eat Right

Owning Your Own Home Begins With Budget Plan

About 80 per cent. of the Canadian families who build or buy new houses require financial assistance through mortgage loans. Mortgage financing offers a successful means to home-ownership providing careful thought is given at the outset to the two major financial considerations—the amount of the initial investment and the amount which will be available to meet the expenses of month-to-month ownership.

The savings you have in cash, bonds or other securities should govern the amount of your down payment in the purchase of a house or your investment in building. A simple housing budget will enable you to determine how much you can allow to meet the monthly costs of home-ownership. In the first column of your housing budget total your gross income. In column two, list all your present living expenses other than housing costs such as rent, heating, maintenance and repair, and any special municipal taxes you may be paying as a tenant. Subtract the total in column two from column one and you will have the monthly amount available for home-ownership. If present rental payments are a strain on family finances, a suitable adjustment to the rent figure in the housing budget will be necessary.

The next step is to estimate the monthly expenditures which will be required to meet the costs of taxes, fire insurance, heating, and maintenance and repair, which should be considered as a monthly expense from the beginning. With these estimates you will be able to arrive at the amount available for principal and interest payments on a mortgage loan, remembering that annual mortgage payments plus taxes and fire insurance should not exceed 25 per cent. of your gross income.

TRY AND STOP ME!

By BENNETT CERF

Asked for an autobiographical note, America's foremost living humorist, James Thurber, obliged with the following: "I expect to reach 75, since the care I take of my magnificent body is well known—and my one-eighth vision happily obscures sad and ungainly sights, leaving only the vivid and the radiant, some of whom are my friends and neighbours. My pleasures are clean and simple. I like to sit around at night, holding untenable positions against logical and expert assault, listening to ball games on the radio, and romping with my wife and daughter and our female French poodle who is nine, but doesn't look a day over five. She thinks she is a human being and not a dog, and no one is allowed to let her look into a mirror. Just like you, I expect to be blown up; but hope that I won't be."

Although South had visions of a slam after a Two No-Trump response to his One Spade opening, he kept the bidding low until a fit in a suit had been found. His rebid of Three Diamonds was forcing, and North bid Three Spades as he did not feel strong enough at this stage to suggest an 11-trick contract in Diamonds. South persisted with a cue bid of Four Clubs, and North now gave a good picture of his hand with a jump to Five Diamonds, which South converted to Six.

With both black Kings off-side, the slam can only be made in Diamonds after the natural lead of a Heart. Trumps are drawn and the Spade finesse loses, but two of Dummy's Clubs are discarded on the long Spades and South's 5 is ruffed with Dummy's last trump.

On The Side : By E. V. Durling

Official Coinage

In Great Britain prices for goods, services, etc., are still often quoted in guineas. Yet there is no longer any such British coin as a guinea. The British coinage system is the most complicated I have ever encountered.

How It Should Be Done

The majority of pipe smokers don't really know how to smoke a pipe as it should be smoked. For one thing few know how to pack a pipe to get the maximum of smoking pleasure out of a pipeful of tobacco. How long does the average smoker make a pipeful last? The world's record for making a pipeful of one-eighth of an ounce of tobacco last is two hours and twelve minutes. This record was established by a man named Wood in a smoking contest held in London in 1907.

Perfection In Figures

What is the perfect feminine figure? Seems to be a great difference of opinion as to this. Recently some experts on this subject selected Ann Wrigg, British actress, to impersonate Lady Godiva at Coventry during the coming Festival of Britain. They said that Ann has a "perfect figure". That she is a "living symbol of perfect womanhood." Miss Wrigg's measurements are as follows: Height, five feet, four and one-half inches; bust, thirty-six; waist, twenty-six; hips, thirty-seven; weight, one hundred and twenty-four pounds.

House With Two Heads

Do you wear the pants in your family and your wife the slacks? I mean, are you in control of the household? Does your wife admit it? On the British census form appeared the following question: "Who is the head of the home?" It seems quite a few wives objected to admitting officially that their husbands were tops in the household. So they wrote after the aforementioned query: "No head in our home. It is a fifty-fifty arrangement."

Untaxable Tips

According to the highest court in Great Britain, tips cannot be considered as wages. The court in giving the ruling commented: "When a customer gives a tip to a waiter, the money becomes the property of the latter. The customer has no intention of giving anything to the employer." Consider how a ruling that tips belong to the employee and not the employer would affect the hat-check concession business in hotels. Still it would be no more than right. When a man tips a hat-check girl, he wants to tip her, not her boss.

To Everyone His Choice

Eighty-five per cent. of neckties worn by men are purchased by women. That is as it should be. Women have better color sense than men. A smart fellow lets his wife buy his neckties. However, a man should select his own hats. Also his own shirts. Women go to extremes in their suggestions as to hats and shirts. Men have a better sense of proportion. Know the value of simplicity better. Let your neckties be wild, gentlemen, but keep conservative for the rest of your attire.

UNIFORMS DELAY WOMEN'S ENLISTMENTS—A streamlining of the outfits worn by the women's division of the R.C.A.F. is under way. It is believed the boy was abducted by a 29-year-old Toronto salesman and brought to Montreal where he was left to wander aimlessly around until discovered by police. A long distance phone call to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Frenette of Toronto confirmed his identity. The parents immediately left by auto for Montreal where they joyfully greeted their wandering son. Police are searching for the salesman who is wanted for questioning.

More Hints On Hitting

Last week we outlined the fundamentals of good hitting, starting with the stance and covering the swing itself. Here are a few more general tips which will help you boost your batting averages.

Can You Hit A Bad Home Run?

Silly as it sounds, there is such a thing as a bad home run. The phrase describes four-baggers hit off balls not thrown in the strike area. To quote Ted Williams, one of the best fence-busters in the American League, "I get annoyed when I hit a bad home run because when I do I know I'm heading for trouble."

Major League coaches and scouts don't like bad ball hitters. "The first objective of a good hitter is to swing only on strikes," they explain. "If you don't, no matter if the results are good occasionally, you will wind up with a low batting average, and will be a sucker for a good pitcher."

Remember this well. Take a closer look next time you are at bat and watch for the bad balls. Leave this "sucker bait" strictly alone.

Covering The Plate

Research indicates that only three hitters in 10 swing in such a way as to cover the width of the plate with their bat. Some swing so that an inside pitch will be hit close to the bat handle others so that the thick end of the bat doesn't cover the outside corners.

Many major leaguers, including Johnny Mize and Ted Williams, use the following system of ensuring proper plate coverage.

Stand a few inches away from the plate, taking your normal hitting stance. Bend over from the hips, keeping the arms outstretched and the knees stiff. With a normal grip on the bat, place the tip on the ground an inch or two on the far side of the plate. Now, shuffle your feet back as far as you can without moving the tip of the bat from its position on the ground. Remember not to bend your knees.

When you have moved back as far as you can without moving the bat or leaning on it, note the position of your feet. Measure the distance from the plate, and make sure you stand on this spot every time you bat. Then you can be sure that your bat will cover the strike area when you swing.

How Much Practice Makes Perfect?
Recent research by psychologists and several experts in the physical development field has shown that learning ability begins to fall off

Drop In Wheat Acreage May Cause Bread Rationing

INVERCARGILL, N.Z. — An "alarming and tragic" drop in wheat acreage may this year cause bread rationing in New Zealand for the first time, John Stanley, liaison officer between flour millers and farmers, told a meeting.

Stanley said New Zealand is growing 160,000 acres of wheat instead of the 400,000 needed to feed the population. It was impossible to bring more wheat from overseas.

KAMLOOPS SETS WORLD BLOOD DONOR RECORD

KAMLOOPS, B.C. — The Red Cross has confirmed that this interior British Columbia city holds the world's record for blood donor collections.

In five days recently, the Red Cross mobile blood donor clinic was visited by 2,000 Kamloops residents. The city has a population of 12,500.

"It's fantastic but true," said Provincial Red Cross Director B. P. L. Moore, who confirmed Kamloops claim to the record.

WALLPAPER

Wallpaper may be removed quite easily by using a heaping tablespoon of saltpeter to a gallon of hot water and applying to the walls with a brush. The water should be kept hot. After a few applications the paper should peel off with little effort.

Saskatchewan

$20,000,000 To Be Spent On Oil Exploration This Year

REGINA. — More than $20 millions will be spent on oil exploration and development work in Saskatchewan in 1951, according to the prediction of Resources Minister J. H. Brockelbank. This will be more than double last year's total of between $8 millions and $10 millions.

Plans drawn up so far by more than 50 companies taking part in the Saskatchewan oil play formed the basis of Mr. Brockelbank's estimate.

The minister also said that he is "looking forward to the discovery of light oil somewhere in Saskatchewan this year." While activity is expected to be intensified throughout favorable areas of the province, a "concentrated effort" is expected in the southeastern parts of the province underlain by the Williston Basin which has proven productive of oil recently in both Manitoba and North Dakota (50 miles south of Estevan).

All Saskatchewan oil records will probably be broken again this year as they were in 1950. Mr. Brockelbank said, except those applying to the preliminary types of exploration.

He pointed out that the geophysical data in many of the permit areas is nearing final assessment and because of this the majority of the wells drilled this year will be exploring favorable formations for oil rather than primarily for geological information.

Already, he said, plans are being finalized for the drilling of 30 to 40 standard type holes. In addition hundreds of seismic holes will be drilled to sufficient depth to define more accurately possible productive formations which were indicated by previous exploration.

Mr. Brockelbank pointed out that so far the majority of exploration work carried out in this province has been of the preliminary and less expensive types, while this year's intensive and expensive program will be mainly based on seismic work and actual oil-well drilling.

Last year's expenditure on oil exploration and development in Saskatchewan was only about $4 millions less than the expenditure in Alberta in 1946, the year before Alberta's great oil boom started with the finding of the Leduc field. This year, he said, expenditure is expected to equal or surpass the $23 millions that was spent in Alberta in 1947, the year of the Leduc find. — The Financial Post.

Three-year-old Georgia Kay King, of Springfield, Ill., flashed a bright smile and a full set of false teeth recently. Until the dentures were made, she could eat only baby foods. A rare disease destroyed the enamel-producing cells of her teeth in early infancy. Only soft dwarf-like tooth buds developed. More natural teeth eventually will grow but the dentists said these, too, will be inadequate.

A Milwaukee man enrolled in a "How to Make Friends and Influence People" course. On his first night in class someone stole his new $20 hat.

Circuit Judge Robert J. Kirkwood, of St. Louis, dismissed a charge of tampering with an automobile against Anderson B. Topp for lack of evidence. During recess, the judge opened his mail and found a letter written two days before by Topp. "Judge, your honor," the letter read, "will you please call me over? I want to plead guilty to the charge they got me on." Judge Kirkwood reinstated the charge and ordered Topp re-arrested.

Two-year-old Thomas Paiva, Jr., of New York, tumbled 15 floors from the window of his parents' apartment. He suffered only a broken leg. The boy fell to the freshly spaded soil of a garden. Vines on the building and five-foot-high shrubbery broke his fall.

Variety Of Transportation Used By Children In Getting To School

WEEKES, Sask.—Nine youngsters from the nearby Dillabough district ease school boredom with a variety of transportation.

They're never quite sure whether it will be car, sleigh, wagon, tractor, train or railway speeder, depending on the season.

Jack Watt has been made responsible by the Hudson Bay school unit for getting the children to school here the last three years. He hasn't missed often.

Winter travel isn't arduous because even if roads are blocked, he usually can find open lumbering trails. But spring in this area of northern Saskatchewan, near the Manitoba border, makes all roads quagmires.

Rail service meshes with school hours so that the nine can get through by freight train, coming home by passenger. If the train's late, the railroad section gang gasoline speeder is on hand.

Canada Outdoes Russia On Wheat

OTTAWA. — Canada's record of providing wheat for India compared favorably with that of other countries and particularly favorably with that of Russia, Rt. Hon. D. C. Howe, Trade Minister, said recently.

Replying to opposition members who criticized Canada's attitude towards India's famine, Mr. Howe said Canada has sold India this year 300,000 tons or 10,000,000 bushels of wheat.

That compared with the 2,000,000 tons the U.S. proposed to let India have on a loan basis. It compared "very well" with the 50,000 tons Russia was proposing to send.

LUXURY ITEM

Price Of Brides Going Up

LONDON.—The colonial office reported glumly that Western-style inflation had boosted the price of brides among the Gusi tribe in East Africa until they have become a luxury item.

Up until 1942 a man could get a grade A bride for six cows, one bull and 10 goats. But then the war and the effects of civilization began to penetrate into the British crown colony of Kenya and the price of a good wife went up.

At the end of 1947, young tribesmen complained they were being asked to deliver more than 16 cows, one bull and as many as 20 goats for the same quality wife they could have picked up at half the price a few years back.

The ruling Barazas — Gusi tribal councils — figured the only way to fight this inflationary spiral was with another Western device—price control.

So in 1948 the grand tribal council pegged the price of a reliable brand Gusi wife at the pre-inflation rate of six cows, one bull and 10 goats.

For a while things settled down peacefully in Gusi country and a man could pick up a wife without straining his budget.

But now one more Western trend has crept into the daily life of the tribe. Gusi fathers with especially desirable daughters began demanding "under-the-counter" payments in addition to the fixed price of six cows, one bull and 10 goats.

The effect, the colonial office complained, has been to start the price spiral all over again.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

MISS MAISIE'S MYSTERY

Answering Advertisements
In The Personal Columns
Could Be Very Dangerous,
Said Mrs. Collins

By MARY L. AKSIM

MRS. COLLINS had seen three of the squarish white envelopes addressed in an unmistakable male hand before she mentioned the peculiar matter to Mr. Collins. Mrs. Collins did not believe in prying into her roomers' private lives, or at least so she said. But when Miss Maisie Humphries, who had been with Mrs. Collins for twenty-three years, and who was known to have no relatives or close friends, suddenly began to get mail at regular two-day intervals, Mrs. Collins felt that Miss Maisie's doings would bear a little investigation.

Mr. Collins thought otherwise. For twenty-three years he had seen Miss Maisie slipping in and out of the front door like an unobtrusive ghost, and he now tried to restrain his wife from a frontal attack upon the thin seamstress.

"None of our business at all!" he snapped, and watched Mrs. Collins narrowly until she carried the last letter back to the table in the front hall where the roomers picked up their mail. "Miss Maisie's old enough to take care of herself!"

"But it might be someone trying to rob her or something, George," Mrs. Collins pleaded. "We really ought to ask her..."

Mr. Collins sniffed and rattled his paper ominously. His wife recognized this ancient storm signal and hurried into the dining-room to lay the table for supper.

But if Mr. Collins wasn't interested in Miss Maisie's mail there were others in the house who were. Miss England, the practical nurse who lived in the front room downstairs, had noticed the envelopes, too, and she and Mrs. Collins held a whispered consultation in the dining-room before the other roomers appeared. Miss England was of the opinion that Miss Maisie was lonely and had answered one of those advertisements in the personal column.

"Those things can be very dangerous," she sniffed.

Mr. Dunlop and Mr. West, who worked at the bank and thus were authorities on financial matters, gave it as their opinion that Miss Maisie was being pursued by a bond salesman or someone of that sort.

"Fellows like that will take any means to make a sale," said Mr. West wisely, and Mr. Dunlop nodded in agreement. But Mrs. Collins still was not satisfied.

"Why don't we just ask her outright?" she suggested as Miss Maisie's step was heard in the front hall. Everyone listened as the steps paused before the mail table and then Miss Maisie did an unprecedented thing. She ran up the stairs like a schoolgirl. Mrs. Collins looked at the others triumphantly.

"What did I tell you?" she said.

Miss Maisie was such a long time in her room that Mrs. Collins had to serve a second cup of tea to the bank clerks to keep them at the table. For a moment Mr. West thought that the offer was going to extend to a second piece of pie as well, and led on by this impression, he made bold to offer to put the question to Miss Maisie himself. There was an awkward silence when Miss Maisie at last appeared and Mrs. Collins had to nod several times in Mr. West's direction before he recalled his rash words and cleared his throat loudly.

"Mail," he mumbled at last. "You been getting much mail lately, Alf?"

Mr. Dunlop was completely taken aback but he managed to stammer a hesitant reply in the negative.

Mr. West turned to Miss England. "You been getting much mail?" he asked.

Miss England's reply resembled no sound so much as a hissing cat. She was exasperated at Mr. West's fumbling and resolved to take the matter out of his hands.

"No, I think Miss Maisie's the only one who has been getting any letters," she said.

Mrs. Collins murmured in agreement.

There was a long pause.

Mrs. Collins nodded fiercely in Mr. West's direction. He coughed again and began, "But Miss Maisie, you..."

Miss Maisie looked up from her plate.

"Oh, I think we've all seen those big, square envelopes," giggled Mrs. Collins, archly. As at a prearranged signal the others joined in:

"Oh, come now, Miss Maisie..."

"We won't tell anyone..."

Miss Maisie looked at them all in turn in the puzzled, near-sighted way she always looked. Then she turned calmly back to her supper.

"Well!" said Mrs. Collins as she disappeared through the swinging door to the kitchen. Mr. West and Mr. Dunlop excused themselves and went out into the night. Miss England, very red-faced, took her knitting to her room.

When they had all gone Miss Maisie took the day's letter from her purse and laid it beside her plate where she could read it again as she sipped her lukewarm tea.

"Dear Miss Humphries," it ran, "The complete wardrobe you sent for our little crippled Susan arrived today, and I wish you could have been here to see the child's face when I called her into the office and showed her the new dresses, the coat, and all the other lovely things. These are the first completely new things Susan has ever owned. May I send her thanks and my own? I hope that the measurements, etc., which I sent in my previous letters did not give you too much trouble! Your request was such an unusually thoughtful way to make a little crippled orphan happy. Sincerely, Cut in finely 4 lbs. chilled shortening and mix in ½ c. washed and dried raisins and ¼ c. lightly-packed brown sugar. Combine 1 slightly-beaten egg, ½ c. milk and a few drops almond flavoring. Make a well in dry ingredients and add liquid; mix lightly with fork, adding milk if necessary, to make a soft dough. Knead for 10 seconds on a lightly-floured board and pat out into greased pie plate (7½" top inside measure) and mark into 6 pie-shaped wedges. Bake in hot oven, 425°, about 18 minutes. Serve hot with butter or margarine. Yield — 6 scones.
